

What Happens If: A Dog Bites a Human

Immediately Seek Medical Attention

The first step you must take when a dog pierces your skin is to seek medical attention. Dog bites can leave bacteria and cause infections like rabies, sepsis, and tetanus. If not cleaned right away, you could experience severe sickness, including fevers and night sweats. A medical professional can also treat deep wounds and disfigurements properly.

Call Hoyt & Hoyt

Once you've received medical attention, call Hoyt & Hoyt to perform a proper evaluation and file your dog bite claim to ensure you recover fair compensation to pay for your medical bills and losses. In New Jersey, there is a two-year deadline from the date of the incident you can file a claim. It's best to act as soon as possible.

Don't Speak to Insurance Company Attorneys Alone

If insurance company attorneys call you to discuss your dog bite claim, don't speak to them without Hoyt & Hoyt present. We know dog bite law best and won't let them try to make you settle for less than you deserve.

Receive the Compensation You Deserve

Retaining Hoyt & Hoyt as your dog bite lawyer enables the insurance company to compensate you fairly. We'll provide them with vital evidence to make the process easier to settle.

If you're seeking a dog bite lawyer in NJ, call Hoyt & Hoyt at (973) 490-4844.
We'll help you achieve the justice and compensation you deserve.
